

United Cargo Jet Fuel Index

United Cargo is publishing a fuel index based on what it feels are representative jet fuel prices from around the world. United Cargo will base its decisions on whether to implement, rescind, or increase a fuel surcharge solely on this index. It is hoped that our customers will benefit by being able to better plan their freight movements by taking this information into account.

The following will graphically illustrate United's implementation policy. United will make every effort to publish this information on this site every week pending the availability of the component information.

Average Weekly Jet Fuel Index - 3 Months

100 = 53.8¢/gallon

Average Jet Fuel Index for the Week ending 14-Mar-2008: 591

Methodology

United Cargo will implement a surcharge when the index equals, or exceeds, the indicated level for two consecutive weeks. Conversely, when jet fuel prices decrease, causing the index to decline, the appropriate index level will be rescinded. Upon attainment of a threshold level, United will announce, for immediate effect, the appropriate fuel surcharge level for all shipments two weeks hence.
